

Some Guidelines For writing a Review of a Restaurant

Begin with a statement that mentions the restaurant's name and location.

It is also possible to begin with a "hook" and then provide specifics about the restaurant. (A hook is the first sentence or two of a review. The purpose of a hook is to grab the reader's attention.)

Food – Describe the food on the menu in detail. You can mention a particular dish that you have had there, if you think it is appropriate.

Atmosphere – Discuss the exterior and interior décor. Also mention the ambience and special features of the restaurant.

Service – Some reviews may give details about the service from the first moment a customer enters the restaurant until the customer has finished the meal and leaves. It is okay to mention the name of a server or chef that is exceptionally friendly, helpful or talented.

Clientele – Mention what type of people like to go there. Is there a dress code?

Price – It is important to mention the general price range; however, specifics are not necessary. A "hint" about whether the place is expensive or cheap may be adequate.

Location – Is the restaurant hard to find?

Other details – Do customers need reservations? What are the hours? Is it crowded on weekends?

The "Bottom Line" – Overall Conclusion. Make a couple of final comments and give the restaurant some type of "score" that will help other people decide whether they want to go there or not.

Provide the address and telephone number at the bottom of the review.

Sajjad Restaurant is a little neighborhood joint near Chinatown in Karachi. This unique place is mainly known for its exotic Pakistani seafood. Since it has reasonable prices and is only several blocks from the financial center, it is popular with the business lunch crowd. It is well known in the city for its authenticity. Sajjad offers several set menu choices every day in addition to its regular menu featuring fish or vegetarian cuisine. Some of the popular dishes of this restaurant are chicken Karahi, white korma, chicken handi and other Pakistani dishes. Although the portions are ample, you may want to leave room for some Pakistani pastries for dessert.

One of the other main attractions of this restaurant is the traditional Pakistani décor that provide a perfect ambience for an enjoyable meal. It is this ambience that has helped make Sajjad not just a lunchtime hit, but also a hot spot for couples in the evening. The dining room has an assortment of statues representing the restaurant's Pakistani heritage. There are also many fine works of art displayed on the walls by the dining tables. The restaurant has a number of comfortable booths that offer privacy for a family dinner as well as several tables on the outside near a fountain of an elephant spurting water.

All in all, Sajjad Restaurant is a fantastic place to enjoy not-so spicy Pakistani cuisine. Your meal will be both healthy and hearty. The curries are exquisite, and the fish is always fresh. The staff always greet you with a smile and are helpful when describing the dishes on the menu. You can expect the special treatment every time, but you never have to expect to pay too much. Sajjad gets an "A" in every category and a "big thumbs up" for the delicious food.

Sajjad Restaurant is located in Chinatown:

888 Tipu Sultan road, Karachi Tel: 0300-1234567